

Georgian Oak Dresser Base, 18th Century English Green Man Sideboard, c.1790

DESCRIPTION

Our Stock # LFA-1692 This is a Georgian oak dresser base from the 18th century. An English 'green man' sideboard dating to circa 1790. • Solidly constructed in oak with desirable colour and patina • Displaying wisps of medullary rays in the lustrous wax polished finish • In good proportion with a classic English country feel • Profusely carved with green man masks flanking a central lion mask • Bands of floral guilloché carvings completing the break fronted up-stand • Broad plank top with attractive grain detail and moulded edge • Three deep drawers divided by half column turnings display profusely carved foliate design • Dressed with solid brass drop handles over batwing back-plates with matching escutcheons • Drawers slide easily and retain the original iron locks with key absent • Raised upon stout, circular section, tapering front legs on pad feet, square section rear

An appealing piece and an English classic. Solid joints and construction, delivered waxed, polished and ready for the home.
